

About the IICRC

The Institute of Inspection Cleaning and Restoration Certification (IICRC) is an American National Standards Institute (ANSI) –accredited standard development organization (SDO) which creates certifications and standards for the inspection, cleaning and restoration industries. The mission of IICRC is to identify and promote an international standard of care that establishes and maintains the health, safety and welfare of the built environment. With more than 54,000 Certified technicians and 6,000 Certified Firms in 22 countries, the IICRC, in partnership with regional and international trade associations, represents the entire industry.

For consumers, the IICRC serves as a valuable referral source for certified technicians and firms in more than 20 categories within the cleaning, inspection and restoration industries. Since the IICRC is an independent organization, it sets and promotes the highest standards and ethics to ensure consumers receive the highest quality services. With its cleantrust certification program, the IICRC ensures that when consumers hire a cleantrust-Certified Firm or technician, they have hired experts who will provide assurance that work will be completed in accordance with the industry's "standard of care." The IICRC does not own schools, employ instructors, produce training materials, promote specific product brands, cleaning methods or systems so consumers always benefit from an independent set of standards.

The IICRC can offer experts for media commentary on a wide range of topics including:

- Rug cleaning
